Docutek Announces Grant Program for Public School Systems

New Docutek “Enhancing Teaching and Learning with the Web” Grant encourages easy-to-build classroom websites

Burlingame, CA—March 24, 2003--Docutek, a leading e-learning collaboration and communications company, today announced a new competitive grant program called the Docutek “Enhancing Teaching and Learning with the Web” Grant. Grant recipients will be awarded a customized version of Docutek’s popular Web-based school information sharing system, Docutek atSchool, for two years.

“At Docutek our mission is to enhance education by making online learning simple. This grant program supports that mission by helping budget-strapped school districts get access to technology that can save valuable time for teachers and greatly improve communications with parents and students,” said, Nathan Vince, CEO of Docutek.

With Docutek atSchool teachers can easily create classroom Websites where all relevant information – such as assignments, resources, grades, schedules, and notices - can be posted. Parents and students can then log on to the Websites from their home computers to get updated information. Student discussion groups can easily be organized and parents can email and chat “live” with a teacher. Docutek atSchool saves time by becoming an information resource with the answers to frequently asked questions, such as “What time is band practice?” “What’s the homework assignment?” “When is it due?”

For further information on the new Docutek “Enhancing Teaching and Learning with the Web” Grant and for an application, please see www.docutek.com. The deadline for submission of grant proposals is July 17, 2003.
