Høgskolen i Oslo (Oslo University College)
Selects Docutek VRL*plus

Burlingame, CA – May 27, 2004 - Høgskolen i Oslo (Oslo University College, or OUC) and Docutek today announced OUC's purchase of Docutek VRL*plus*, a virtual reference library solution. OUC will use Docutek VRL*plus* to provide reference services to the more than 10,000 students, faculty, and staff at the school's four separate campuses.

Tove Jacobsen, the Senior Administrative Officer at OUC as well as the librarian responsible for the Web, online databases, and reference, cites two main reasons for selecting Docutek VRL*plus*. First, she said that the system is "a good tool for us as an academic library, especially the co-browsing features which enhance our learning environment." In addition, Jacobsen noted that other libraries in the region (Sweden) have begun to use Docutek VRL*plus* and that "it is important for us to have the possibility to cooperate across country borders."

"We are excited to be working with Oslo University College," said Nathan Vince, CEO of Docutek. "The popularity of our system has been growing in Scandinavia, so this is an important international opportunity for us." Because the OUC system is spread across many campuses, Vince also commented that "the OUC project is an ideal venue for us to showcase the ease-of-use, versatility, and benefits of Docutek VRL*plus*."

About Høgskolen i Oslo (Oslo University College)

Høgskolen i Oslo (Oslo University College, or OUC), is Norway's largest state university college. A young, dynamic institution based on strong traditions, OUC traces its roots through 20 smaller colleges in the Oslo area that merged in 1994. OUC's seven faculties - Business, Education, Engineering, Fine Art and Drama, Health Sciences, Journalism, Library and Information Science, Nursing, and Public Administration and Social Work - offer more than 30 bachelor and master degree programs to approximately 10,000 students. Oslo University College has been designated as a national center for studies in Early Childhood Education, Library and Information Science, Journalism, Mechanical Engineering, and Multicultural Studies.
